Not sure what distemper is? Keep reading!

Distemper is a wide-spread, serious, usually deadly viral disease that attacks the nervous system or other organs of an animal. It is extremely contagious, most frequently found in puppies but all cats and dogs, no matter the age are at risk!

90% OF DOGS INFECTED WILL DIE!

IT IS YOUR RESPONSIBILITY TO PROTECT THEM!

Why Vaccinate an Animal?

When an animal gets its vaccinations, its body builds up a special kind of defense called immunity. Immunity helps protect an animal against diseases by use of specialized proteins called antibodies that attack disease-causing bacteria or viruses when they enter the animal's body. Animals get immunity from their mother's milk when they are nursing. Once the animal gets old enough to eat by itself, that immunity wears off and you must get vaccinations to protect the animal.
